

The What If? Key

What would be some possible consequences if children were never allowed to speak at school? Record your thoughts on a graphic organiser.

- It would be difficult to make and keep friends
- We wouldn't be able to learn from each other
- No one would be able to express their opinions
- It would be hard to let the teacher know how you're feeling or if you need something.
- It would be easy to listen to the teacher
- Children who talk a lot wouldn't be able to distract you from working.
- We would get lots of work done.
- How would the teacher know if we needed something?

I think I would use a P.M.I. for this question because there are both good and bad things as well as a few interesting things to record.
